

SWEDISH DRAMA OPENS AT HUDSON

Arthur Hopkins Presents "The Deluge" for First Time in America.

IT'S TONE IS SERIO-COMIC
Joke Played on Audience by Playwright Proves a Surprise.

Arthur Hopkins, who has optimistically been called the "white hope" among the managers and otherwise exalted by the enthusiastic to an intellectual and artistic state seriously near that of the highbrow, has come into control of the Hudson Theatre. Last night he arose to expectations by producing there a drama from the Swedish, Frank Allen had made the English adaptation of this play by Henrik Berger, a Swedish writer.

It must not be forgotten that Scandinavian drama is a serious thing, not to be approached lightly and in the light of a joke. The play, however, characterizes the playgoer. In fact, to be profoundly serious always has seemed one of the chief preoccupations of the Scandinavian playgoer. The playgoer of good Dr. Ibsen was their model. At all events, Bjornson, Strindberg and other dramatists never have evinced the slightest desire to appeal to our ideas of humor. Sometimes they have been immensely comic without intending to; and that was, of course, not their fault. There were special reasons for maintaining the Scandinavian solemnity of demeanor in the presence of "The Deluge." It is the work of Henrik Berger, now a recognized writer in Sweden, who has made accessible to Americans, "The Deluge," three acts pass in a

RUSSIAN DANCES SWIRL OF COLOR

Bolm and Ballet Intime Display Real Artistry at Booth Theatre.

SETTINGS ARE SIMPLE
Number From "Prince Igor" Especially Pleasing to Audience.

Another message from Russia came to this city last night. This time it was not a political, but an artistic message borne on the wings of Adolf Bolm and his Ballet Intime, opening an engagement of two weeks at the Booth Theatre.

The performance was under the auspices of the American Ambulance in Russia by arrangement with Miss Eliza Maxwell, and certainly the cause of the Slav wounded could not be entrusted to better hands—or feet. M. Bolm and his colleagues, notably Roshnara, Ratan Devi, and Michio Ito, presented a sparkling program, full of swirling color and movement.

Not the least part of the credit for the pulsating effects produced was due to Willy Pogany, who proved that he is not an artist whose beginning and end is in a magazine poster. None of the settings, save in the "Sho-Jo" number of "The Prince Igor," through the use of but with their cool, swaying draperies they formed a tonic for a day spent among the colorless facades of downtown New York.

The scene that compressed the most vividness into a small space and elicited the most applause was the last, the dance from "Prince Igor." Through the use of a simple, but effective, set, the audience might have been expected to be fagged by the time this was reached through abundance of rich impressions and the theatergoer's attention was quickened by the use of the Russian folk song, "The Chief Warrior," which was sung by the dancers in a most effective manner.

Roshnara, who played with her customary sinuous grace and with all her uncanny sense of rhythm, but so great was the distraction to the eye through the shifting masses of color from the other performers in this scene on the Russian steppes that she seemed somewhat lost. Her restrained, graceful dance from "The Prince Igor," which was a Hindu Juke dance and the Ceylon harvest dance.

One of the most striking choruses, though hardly the most appealing, was that of the Dance Macabre, in which M. Bolm and Rita Zalmay depicted the efforts of two Spanish lovers to escape from an epidemic of plague in the sixteenth century only to fall in the arms of sardonic death at the end. In this and other numbers M. Bolm danced with all his fiery impetuosity. The scene of the Dance Macabre, which was a Hindu Juke dance and the Ceylon harvest dance.

So far once a Scandinavian playwright had not been serious. The result was that the play, which was a Hindu Juke dance and the Ceylon harvest dance, was a Hindu Juke dance and the Ceylon harvest dance.

Arthur Hopkins had selected the company which rendered "The Deluge" faultlessly. Robert McWade was, of course, at home as the noisy grouch, while Frederick Perry and Guy Nichols Adams, as the two brothers, were equally natural, which was the mood in which the play had to be acted. The character of the play was a Hindu Juke dance and the Ceylon harvest dance.

Charles Dillingham has chosen "Jack of Lanterns" as the title of the new production. The play is a Hindu Juke dance and the Ceylon harvest dance.

GET READY FOR BIG SMOKE FUND DRIVE

To-morrow Is Fixed for the Rush to United Cigar Stores.

IT WILL HELP FIGHTERS
Street Cleaning Department Joins in Campaign to Aid Khaki Lads.

Gen. Pershing said last week: "This is no time for half way measures or lukewarm efforts; it is a time for big things."

We choose this for our text today because we are doing in this Sun Tobacco Fund one of the major elements that will contribute toward the success of our troops abroad.

Our commander in France can gain victory more quickly if his soldiers are contented. For that contentment tobacco is a prime essential. As they have no other means of getting their smoke, they must have it.

Opportunity for one of these "big things" lies before us to-morrow, when the United Cigar Stores will give 5 percent of their gross proceeds from 250 centres in the metropolitan district.

Suppose you lived on the outskirts of a camp and the soldiers there craved tobacco. You would give them all you could. You would do it without question and without stint. Greater than the reason for giving when our fellows are 3,000 miles from their source of supply. It is upon you they rely.

Here is how it works out to-morrow: You buy your cigarettes, say a box of twenty. One of those goes to the lad in khaki who sadly needs it. If you purchase a box of cigarettes the tobacco value of one out of every twenty goes into the trenches through The Sun Fund. Out of every box of tobacco you buy you will be filling the pipe of one of the American boys. This happens to-morrow, whether you think of it or not.

If the man in khaki was at your elbow you would buy enough for both of you. You would do that to-morrow. You will be getting all you bought anyhow—to put it in selfish form—the soldier will get his out of you. You will be doing it for him. You will be doing it for him. You will be doing it for him.

Now then face the matter generously. If your normal supply of tobacco costs you 50 cents a day, buy a dollar's worth to-morrow, or two dollars' worth if you can afford it. Your tobacco will not spoil on you, there is nothing added to your normal budget, but it will mean more to those fellows who must have it. Now then face the matter generously.

Won't you feel better Wednesday when you are puffing your pipe, your cigarette, or your cigar, and know that where in France there is a lad wearing Uncle Sam's uniform who is getting as comfortable out of it as you are—that it is your treat?

This is a fine thing the United Cigar Stores are doing, this giving up one-twentieth of their gross receipts. Now let's see if we can make the most of it. Pitch in, everybody!

A rallying call for all the men in the Street Cleaning Department was sent out yesterday by John J. Fetherston, Commissioner. At his suggestion and with the full cooperation of his bureau chiefs it was decided that the baseball team in that quarter will be the semi-professional team in this neck of the woods and last Sunday went out to Jersey to give punishment to baseball amateurs in that quarter.

Next Sunday they will meet the Bronx Leaguers, a team that has been doing some lambasting in the upper section of the city. Commissioner Fetherston's men feel confident they will make a neat job of these leaguers, so they will bring along their band to add to the excitement. And the S. C. band is a considerable outfit, too. In addition to this there will be a group of singers. So, all in all, it will be quite an occasion.

The game will be no admission charged for the game. Everybody is welcome, but if the spirit of generosity toward our soldiers in France moves any one there nothing to prevent him from dropping a contribution into The Sun boxes.

Today's Aid to Beauty
Hair is by far the most conspicuous thing about us and is probably the most easily damaged by bad or careless treatment. If we are very careful in hair washing, we will have virtually no hair troubles. An especially fine shampoo for this weather, one that brings out all the natural beauty of the hair, that dissolves and entirely removes all dandruff, cleans the scalp, and leaves the hair soft and shining, is Acne-Morinate-Line. It is used at trifling expense by simply dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox (which you can get at any drug-gist's) in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. This chemically dissolves all impurities and creates a soothing, cooling lotion. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant, while the hair takes on the glossiness of natural color, also a softness which makes it seem much heavier than it is. After a canthrox shampoo, arranging the hair is a pleasure.
